OWEN MAKES APPEAL TO THE SONS OF VETERANS

Montgomery, February 5.—(Special.)—Maj. Thomas M. Owen, commander-in-chief of the United Sons of Confederate Veterans, today issued an open letter to their camps and members of the United Confederate veterans appealing for aid and assistance in reviving old camps of sons of veterans and urging the organization of new ones. Major Owen is very anxious to see a renewal of interest in the sons of veterans by the time the next reunion meets in New Orleans. The letter in part says: "On more than one public occasion you have declared your sympathy with the objects and purposes for the accomplishment of which our organization was formed. Our constitution and our literature, our scheme of administration, our objects and purposes are yours in miniature. In the constitution the sons are formally made your legatees. In resolutions adopted in New Orleans you declared that the veterans should see to it that in Confederate gatherings and celebrations, the sons be given prominence. They are the heirs of and must by association with the veterans be taught the glorious heritage that belongs to them."

"Projected and carried forward under such auspices the sons have a right to expect and do expect a continuance in an enthusiastic way of your support and encouragement."

"The approaching reunion in New Orleans affords an opportunity upon which to base a renewed appeal to you and each of you for help in making our part of the reunion the success which would delight both you and us. In many localities our camps are practically dead. These we desire to revive. In hundreds of communities in the south where camps should exist, we have no organization.

"These places we ought to enter. 'Appeal is made to you to come to our help. If you love the cause, if you wish to see our Confederation live, if you wish to see it an active and growing factor in the preservation of the history and traditions of the Confederacy and its people, if you wish to become a more powerful agency in our opportunities for relief work, if you wish us to accomplish the task we have set ourselves to for the erection of a monument to the women of the Confederacy, you will at once go to work on the boys in your vicinity, and you will not cease your efforts until their camp is placed in good standing, until it holds regular meetings, and until it projects some specific activity. If no camp is already in existence, you will persist until one is formed."

"You will the more readily respond to this appeal if you reflect that the success of our confederation is inseparably bound up with the future of the cause you so much venerate and love. Our failure will surely be taken as an indication that the heritage of the Confederate soldier is not sufficient to sustain a great patriotic organization."

The commander-in-chief hopes to have more than a thousand replies to this appeal from the veterans in the next thirty days.

Home Life of the Czarina.

Isabel F. Hargood in Harper's Bazar. A charming, simple home is the Alexander palace. But there is one room which must, I think, have been—must be—supremely painful. It is the library, paneled with mirrors, against which are affixed, like brackets, small half models of all the vessels in the navy—the mirror completing the image. I had the use of that library during the summer I spent at Tsarskoe Selo, and paused most frequently after selecting my books before the odd circular Popovs, named after the inventor of the wireless telegraph, and the Admiral Popoff. Not in this palace does the Tsaritzin have to wear the adaptation of the national costume which Katherine II. established as the court dress; that is reserved for "national" days at court, such as New Year's day, the Epiphany, Easter, and so forth. That is the costume which, in miniature, and in pretty adaptation of the kokoshnik or crown, is preserved, together with all accessories, down to the gloves, fan, stockings and slippers, in the museum of the Kremlin in Moscow.

Held in Honor.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin. The great magazine was holding a reception.

Through the stately rooms passed a throng of poets, artists, essayists and philosophers.

Among all these famous persons was one, a fat man with a bald head, whom the editor particularly honored.

"And who is he?" I asked.

"That," my companion answered, "is the greatest of the magazine's regular contributors."

"And," I went on, "the nature of his contributions is?"

"Financial. He contributes $50,000 every year in half-oil advertisements."

IS BEER A FOOD PRODUCT?

Department of Agriculture Takes Up Investigation.

Washington, February.—That beer is a food product and that it is fast coming to be classed with the least harmful beverages, is a claim now receiving the close attention of the government experts connected with the department of agriculture. The department of agriculture is, the subject, having referred to it frequently in lectures. Doctor Wiley is not yet ready to make any statement or report on the question as to whether beer is a food product.

"I will say this much," he said today, "that the use of beer and wines adds to the work of temperance. To illustrate, there is not near so much intemperance in Germany, where wines and beer are used to such a great extent, as there is in Scotland, where spirituous liquors are principally used."

Germany, Great Britain and the United States, in the order named, are the largest producers of the beverages, and the general good health of the Germans, English and Americans is pointed to as strong proof of the argument that beer is a food product, and that its consumption aids, instead of retarding, the work of temperance.

USES CHLOROFORM TO END HER LIFE

Young Woman at Selma Leaves Two Letters

CON J. GRIFFIN IS DEAD

Well Known Selma Man Leaves Many Relatives and Friends—Was a Member of the City Council at Time of Death.

Selma, February 5.—(Special.)—Lying on a table in her room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Cawthon, where the writer was employed as house maid, was found the following, on the back of which was written: "Please give this to Mr. J. W. Douglas, 470 Louisiana ave., N. W., Washington, D. C."

"Dear Sir: I write to let you know that I intend to kill myself and thank you for all of your kindness and trouble in looking after me. If there would be any money please give it to Viola Suddarth, 1415 Florida avenue, N. W."

"I cannot say any more. Good night and good bye."

"BERTHA MARSDEN."

"58 Lapsley Street, Selma, Ala."

Near the open sheet of paper stood an ounce bottle of chloroform which was empty. On the bed, a mug from the washstand into which the contents of the bottle had been poured, pressed close to her nostrils lay the form of a young woman cold in death.

How long before she was discovered this morning the end had come was not known. She went to her room last night as usual and this morning failing to appear in the office, the writer called to find a visit to her room revealed the fact that in a fit of despondency she had taken her life.

Last October Mr. and Mrs. Cawthon returning from a trip to New York and Washington brought Bertha Marsden back with them as a waiting maid and nurse to their little daughter. She was a modest young woman, small in stature but full of energy and a most excellent servant. She appeared entirely satisfied with her position and performed the light tasks assigned to her with cheerfulness. She often spoke of late of going to be married and it was expected that in the near future she would leave the home in Selma in which she was employed and go to the man of her choice.

Her death and by her own hands was therefore a severe shock to her employers. Governor Brinlin was notified immediately upon the discovery of the result of the rash act and an investigation showed conclusively that death had been self-inflicted. The chloroform had been poured into the mug into which some cotton had been placed and the young woman had evidently deliberately held it to her nostrils until the fumes rendered her unconscious.

There was another letter found on the table addressed to "Mr. Sam Dalton, 18 Patton avenue, Asheville, N. C." and enclosed in an envelope stamped and ready for mailing. This letter contained protestations of love for the person to whom it was addressed and expressed regret that she could not be near him when the end came. "I am going to take chloroform," the letter read. It stopped at the end of the half sheet and had no signature.

Miss Marsden was well educated, gentle in disposition and faithful to the highest degree.

Mr. Douglas, to whom the first letter was addressed, was notified of the death of the young woman, and inquiries made as to what disposition to make of the remains.

Con J. Griffin Is Dead.

This morning about half past 5 o'clock, surrounded by his family and sisters, death came to Con J. Griffin, a highly respected citizen. Mr. Griffin had a stroke of paralysis about nine months ago, from which he recovered after a lengthy illness. He was never entirely his robust self again, however, and his friends and loved ones have continued to be anxious about him.

Yesterday evening about 6 o'clock while sitting in a chair at a drug store on East Alabama street, he was seized with another stroke of paralysis and had to be carried to his home, nearby. He remained conscious until about 8 o'clock, when he sank into a stupor, from which he never aroused.

Mr. Griffin was born in Linnick county, Ireland, fifty-eight years ago. He came to this country when a mere boy, and settled in Pennsylvania. After the war he came to Selma and became an engineer on the old Selma, Rome and Dalton railroad, of which the Southern railway is now the successor. Mr. Griffin was popular with his co-workers and the officials of the railroad, and was counted one of the best engineers in the service. Throwing of the life and, having through his efforts, saved up enough to engage in business, he left the road and established a store on the corner of Moxey and Alabama streets. He afterward went into the drug and saloon business, but sold out the latter last October, and has since then been giving his entire attention to his drug business.

He was at the time of his death a member of the City Council of Selma, having been elected last May. He was also a member of the City Council from 1891 to 1894. In that body his endeavor was for the good of his constituents and his efforts will be missed by the city.

He was a member of the Catholic Knights and of Selma lodge No. 157, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is survived by his wife and seven children. The latter are John J., David H., Con J., Jr., Charles, James, Nellie and Margaret. Two sisters also survive him. They are Mrs. Boylar and Miss Margaret Griffin. These have the tenderest sympathy of many friends in their sorrow.

Mr. Griffin was a man of great liberality. No needy person ever applied to him in vain. His charity was unostentatious but lavish and there are many hearts from which clouds of darkness have been lifted through his instrumentality. He was a consistent member of the Catholic church from which edifice on Washington street the funeral will occur tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Married Last Night.

Last night occurred the wedding of Miss Alice Denman and Mr. Eugene C. Culverhouse. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. W. Gambell, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church. The many friends of the young people wish for them much happiness and success.

Parsons Still in Doubt.

Montgomery, February 5.—(Special.)—A Journal special from Washington Sunday says:

"Asked this morning about the Parsons nomination for United States district attorney Senator Pettus said Parsons' name was on the calendar for consideration but he was uncertain what would be done with the case."

OLD GLORY FLOATS ABOVE NEW PAINT

But the Capitol Clock Refuses to Budge

IT CANNOT EVEN BE COAXED

Governor Orders Election for Major to Succeed Atkins—Cheap School Building Down in St. Stephens.

BY HERVEY W. LAIRD.

Montgomery, February 5.—(Special.)—Through the breezes that blow about the new flag pole on the dome of the state capitol today floats a twenty-foot edition of Old Glory that can be seen from afar and it attracts attention as it always does at this altitude. Perhaps half the men who have walked up Dexter avenue today have looked at the beloved banner and lifted their hats to its cheerful coloring flashing in and out as the winds toss it hither and yon. The flag is a part of the Governor, and he likes to have it there, save once in a while when it is replaced for a time by the hefty bars and white field of the St. Andrew's cross of the state emblem.

The flag does more today than it did last week or the week before. It attracts attention to the newly painted and repaired dome and the handsome front of the building as a whole, with its new dress of white lead and oil. But there is a discordant note that stands out as plainly as the others that are good. The clock, long the convenience of the people of the city, is dead. It refuses to run in spite of all the coaxing Keeper Barnett can do and all the cussing disappointed pedestrians can unload. When asked why it did not go around Colonel Barnett hung his head in sorrow and silently walked away.

Clock Is a Fake.

The clock is a series of troubles to everybody who likes to have it going and it does not get another contribution to the disaster that attends business that belongs to more than one man or set of men. While it is there by reason of the progress of the state it is the business of the city to keep it going. The city has delegated the duty of activity on the part of the time piece to some man who has been unable to get results.

For several days two weeks ago it ran an hour fast. Every man in sight was seen to look at the clock, then at a watch if he had one, and then look puzzled. As he handed to keep people in trouble the hands moved one night around to 9:20 and stopped.

There they remained until a man went up to clean up the face. He brightened it up the brass figures and ran it around to 5:25, whether a. m. or p. m. is not known, and there the end has remained since. Some one ought to take it in hand and relieve the state of the odium of keeping up even a clock that will not work, or else cover the space with a picture. However, the last report came from Secretary J. Kirk Jackson. It was this: "I will tell its troubles to the Mayor." He did not even do that but induced Recording Secretary Condit to tell it.

To Elect a Major.

Governor Jelks has instructed the adjutant general to issue an order for the election of a major to command the cavalry squadron, to succeed Maj. V. B. Atkins, who has resigned and will be sent to the front in his own regiment. It is thought that Capt. and Adj. Charles E. Dexter of Montgomery will be elected to the head of the squadron. He has made a splendid reputation at the helm with Major Atkins and has many good friends in the service.

There was some talk a few days ago that there would be no more of the cavalry, it having been reported that a movement was on foot to muster it out so that more money could be given to the infantry arm. However, when approached on the subject the governor said that nothing of the kind would be done. It was heard that the infantry men, led by Colonel DuMont, of Mobile, the First regiment, in place of Maj. Howard Gilliard, who will be retired at his own request.

Hill's Find.

I. W. Hill, state Superintendent of Education, has discovered a good thing for the educational interests of St. Stephens. In a school building which can be bought for the munificent sum of $70, it was constructed by the Methodists of that district for a school but has not been used since 1890. It will be sold to the town district for the sum mentioned. Mr. Hill was there Saturday and says the town is going to put up the money and take it. It is one of the best buildings in the state for some time.

Mr. Hill was at an institute at St. Stephens Saturday and is greatly impressed with the outlook for school work in the county. The people are alive to the needs of the children and are building several handsome school houses in the county. Many progressive methods have been put into service and the work of the teaching has been very much improved.

Of the $1000 which Mr. Hill is to distribute to help build school houses in the country districts, $300 have been assigned to Bullock, one to Madison and one to Geneva, the assignments being made in $100 lots. Alleville, a new town, has reported a $1500 building by plans furnished by the department.

Things in Dale.

J. M. Carmichael, state auditor, has returned from a visit of several days to Dale county, from which section he says he would rather go to heaven than any other in the world, and says that there is a lot more work done there than politics. One or two more men have come out for the legislature, and Editor Harry Martin is running a lot for Congress, but the people, who will do the voting, are not taking any stock in anything just now that has not to do with the crops and the business of the section. In fact, it seems to him that the people of the modest walks of life have taken on a new enthusiasm for work that will make the country richer than even at this time.

The judge would not like to have much said about it but he is quietly of the opinion that a great many are preparing to put in big cotton crops and he would not be surprised if the "piny woods" section does not show larger acreage than last year. He also heard it said here and there that Mr. Comer has a big following for governor, though Dr. Cunningham is quite strong. But he was too busy while there to learn a great deal.

Failure.

From Harper's Weekly. "Very frequently," says a New York lawyer, "there is an element of unconscious humor in the findings of a jury. To my mind, the best I ever heard in this connection was the verdict brought in by a coroner's jury in Michigan, who were called upon to pass upon the case of the sudden death of a merchant in Lansing."

The finding was as follows: "We, the jury, find from the physician's statement that the deceased came to his death from heart failure, superinduced by business failure, which was caused by speculation failure, which was the result of failure to see far enough ahead."

Second's Officers.

The election in the Second regiment Friday resulted in the selection of Maj. Ernest Carter of Selma as lieutenant colonel to succeed Colonel Bricken, promoted, and G. O. Dickey of Luverne and E. F. Baber, Jr., of Montgomery, majors.

Baber only came out Friday, but his friends had been hard at work for him. He received 22 votes to 18 for Capt. V. A. Collier of Tuscaloosa. These returns are not official, but as they come pretty straight are no doubt correct. It will be a day or two yet before they get to the office of Adj. Gen. William W. Brandon.

The election of Captain Baber means a vacancy at the head of the Montgomery Blues. It is thought that Lieut. William Weiss will be promoted to the vacancy, and that Second Lieut. Julius Pierce and First Sgt. Edward Dow will be elected to the two places in line.

The election of Major Carter to the second place was a foregone fact some time since. He was a leader in the dominant faction of the regiment and had no opposition. Major C. P. Anderson of Montgomery did not stand for re-election and will go on the retired list at his own request. The third major is John D. Elliott, a leading banker of Birmingham.

SOLVENCY OF CITY IS NOW ASSURED

ANNISTON COUNCIL RATIFIES CONTRACT FOR SETTLEMENT OF $16,000 OUTSTANDING INDEBTEDNESS.

Anniston, February 5.—(Special.)—As a result of the special session of the city fathers, the solvency of the Model City is vindicated, and her financial credit in the markets of the world reaffirmed. The object of
